Because of the disasters in 1916, the Rumanian army was completely reorganized between March and June 1917. After that date it had 15 consecutively numbered infantry divisions, the 1st & 2nd Cavalry Brigades, 1st & 2nd Calarasi Brigades and the Granicelor Brigade, which was later expanded into a division.

In theory there were still 80 infantry regiments. The 1st through 40th were still intact, but the 41st through 80th were paired to form 20 combined regiments in the field, thus the 46th and 61st were merged to form the 46/61st Infantry Regiment. This lead to the divisions having only 4 infantry regiments formed in two brigades. Each regiment had 3 battalions.

The 1st through 10th Division also had a Vanatori Regiment of two light battalions. In the fall of 1917, the Vanatori battalions were withdrawn to form independent Vanatori Brigades. Finally the border ("Granicelor") Brigade was formed with two regiments.

As in 1916, the two cavalry divisions in 1917 had 6 regiments each. Each regiment had six squadrons. However, the five Calarasi Brigades were reduced to two. Each of the two army headquarters had a cavalry division and one Calarasi brigade attached. The men generally served dismounted.

Theoretically there were 30 consecutively numbered artillery regiments, of which fifteen were field ("campa") and 15 were howitzer ("obuzie"). Each regiment supposedly had four, four gun batteries (16 guns total). However, many formations were incomplete and the Obuzie Regiments had only two batteries, one with 105mm and the other with 120mm howitzers. There were four heavy ("grea") regiments, each with two battalions of 120mm guns and one battalion of 150mm guns. At the end of 1917 there were 18 field regiments, 15 howitzer regiments, 4 heavy regiments, 2 mountain regiments and 1 horse regiment.
